

With the help of family and friends, breast cancer survivor Carol Daly believes in the power of prayer and being positive to get over the challenges of life. "My family, friends and physicians were my heroes; they all gave me strength and encouragement," she adds. She also encourages other survivors to read everything you can and talk to other survivors because knowledge is power. Carol participates in the Avera Race Against Breast Cancer because she wants to offer support to others and a cause that will someday find a cure.
