

Greg Smith

Type: Multiple Myeloma

“I’m learning that cancer survivors are a lot more common than I ever realized,” says Greg, “Too often we only hear of those who have died of cancer, and not the survivors.” That’s why Greg, who fought multiple myeloma in 2007, believes that it’s important for people to know that survivors exist and that they have a story to tell. Greg kept a positive outlook and decided to just go with the flow. “I started making long-term plans, like attending my grandson’s graduation with the class of 2027.”

The American Cancer Society presents: “Snapshot of Survival”

Photo sponsored by: Avera Cancer Institute, Photography by: Jael Trieb, Brookings